MASTERPIECES OF ART IN THE HEART OF VIENNA

One can hardly think of another museum in which the passion for collecting is manifested as strongly as in Vienna's Leopold Museum. Within the span of a few decades, the physician and collector Rudolf Leopold assembled a collection of more than 5,000 carefully selected artworks. Masterpieces by Gustav Klimt, the world's largest Egon Schiele collection and key works by Oskar Kokoschka provide fascinating insight into the art of the 20th century.

THE WORLD'S LARGEST EGON SCHIELE COLLECTION

The abundance of key works by Egon Schiele (1890-1918) in the Leopold Collection is astonishing: "Cardinal and Nun", "Setting Sun", "Self-Portrait with Chinese Lanterns", "Dead City", "Reclining Woman", "The Island City" and more. There are works from all of the important phases in the artist's career.

GUSTAV KLIMT

The Leopold Museum shows several key masterpieces by Secession founder Gustav Klimt, including "Death and Life", "Attersee" and "Still Pond".

Gustav Klimt was among those artists who founded the Vienna Secession in 1897, and he served as the institution's first president. He played a major role in the development of international Art Nouveau in Vienna around 1900. His cultivation of the "pure line" as an expressive vehicle and his new approach to composition were developments that exerted a decisive influence on the next generation of painters, among them Oskar Kokoschka and Egon Schiele.

VIENNA 1900

In Addition to featuring the works of the expressionist Egon Schiele, the Leopold Museum has also made a name for itself as the museum of Viennese Art Nouveau. No other museum offers a comparable cross section of the exceptional achievements of this uniquely Viennese tradition.

The finest examples of turn-of-the-century Viennese craftsmanship are combined with a presentation of painting, graphic art and sculpture, providing insight into this remarkable era. Designed by artists like Kolo Moser or Josef Hoffmann and produced by the Wiener Werkstätte, these objects bear witness to the timeless elegance of art in Vienna around 1900.

The show “Vienna 1900” at the Leopold Museum is organised in an exciting series of chronologically and thematically linked galleries. The epoch is experienced in a diversity that no other museum can offer, in a broad panorama stretching from the Secession through the arts and crafts of Art Nouveau to Expressionism. On view are works by Gustav Klimt, Kolo Moser, Josef Hoffmann, Otto Wagner, Adolf Loos, Richard Gerstl, Egon Schiele, Oskar Kokoschka and many other artists. Text passages from Sigmund Freud and other writers also illuminate this fascinating epoch.

THE WHITE CUBE IN THE MUSEUMSQUARTIER VIENNA

In 2001 a breathtaking new museum building was presented: the Leopold Museum. Located in the “MuseumsQuartier”, a culture and leisure centre created in a complex of buildings and courtyards that once served as the imperial stables, the 24-meter white cube rises high into the Vienna sky. The architects Ortner & Ortner succeeded, in co-operation with Rudolf Leopold, in erecting a monolith of timeless elegance for the new museum centre. Its generously proportioned windows create a light-flooded setting that exudes classical refinement. The 19-meter, glass-ceilinged atrium numbers among the most impressive contemporary museum interiors. Panorama windows on the fourth floor offer a wonderful view of the Hofburg and the rooftops of historic Vienna.
